Harrison Strows has experience representing businesses, governmental entities, and high-profile individuals in complex civil litigation matters. He is skilled at drafting and arguing pleadings, dispositive motions, and analytical memoranda on a variety of issues, particularly involving disputes over complex business and property transactions.

Working alongside other skilled attorneys, he embraces a collaborative problem-solving approach toward effective advocacy and works closely with clients to advise on effective litigation developments and strategies.

BACKGROUND

Prior to joining Armstrong Teasdale, Harrison was an associate at a Miami-area boutique litigation law firm. He is from Long Island, New York, and during law school, interned for the Hon. Helen Voutsinas of the New York State Supreme Court.
