Additional, and often more senior, lawyers are also recognized for serving as mentors.

Waughn helps clients navigate and comply with complex regulatory regimes, particularly in the data privacy, cybersecurity and white-collar spaces. She assists organizations of all sizes with responding to risk and developing compliance strategies that fit their needs. A skilled data privacy practitioner, she counsels clients to develop, implement and maintain practical privacy and data protection strategies to fit their organization's needs. She is a Certified Information Privacy Professional (CIPP/US) and frequently speaks on and publishes articles about data privacy topics.

Waughn was recognized with other honorees at an event on Thursday, Oct. 12.
