Ozoda Saburi is an associate whose practice focuses on commercial real estate and general corporate matters, advising clients across a broad range of industries. She brings a detail-oriented approach to each engagement, supporting clients through a variety of transactional matters.

Prior to joining the firm, Ozoda gained experience across private practice, institutional legal operations, and public interest law, including work focused on advancing menstrual equity through litigation. Her time within a corporate general counsel's office gives her a practical understanding of how businesses operate and what clients truly need from their legal counsel; a perspective she brings to every engagement. Before attending law school, she worked in Missouri state court administration.

Ozoda earned her J.D. from the University of Missouri School of Law in 2025 and her undergraduate degree from Columbia College in 2021. She is admitted to practice law in Missouri.

BACKGROUND

Ozoda was a summer associate at Armstrong Teasdale prior to joining the firm full time. She also has previously held legal internships with not-for-profit and governmental organizations.
